Faculty profile

The Faculty of Architecture is part of the Czech Technical University in Prague, which was transformed from one of the oldest engineering schools in Central Europe, founded in 1707. At present, the CTU has seven faculties: civil engineering, mechanical engineering, electrical engineering, faculty of nuclear science and physical engineering, faculty of transportation science, faculty of architecture and bio-medical faculty. Graduates and staff members of the Czech Technical University have created numerous remarkable engineering and architectural works, developed noteworthy technologies, mechanical and electrical devices, and achieved notable scientific accomplishments and inventions. Outstanding personalities associated with the CTU have been so numerous that it would not be fair to name a few here and forget the others. Many have gained noteworthy prizes and awards.

1. Color Coding

User will very quickly recognize the color coding system that works across the whole website. Red for EAAE, yellow for supported conferences, purple for projects and so on.

2. Communication

There are several elements that call for action since the first contact with the website. We see the EAAE as an open, modern organisation that wants to support and unite the field of architectural education in Europe.

3. Standardisation

Everything is designed in a unified card system based on a grid with all images with aspect ratio of 3:2. This ensures that everything can be used in News aggregator or Newsletter without any text editing or image cropping.

Menu

Simplified menu with search engine, links to social media and change language option.

Introduction

The main goal of the EAAE website is to attract new members. Therefore at the top of the home page users see:

Slider which explains what EAAE is, in a simple way (short headlines and photos). This should be considered as an overview of what EAAE is and does. Detailed information can be reached by clicking the “read more” button which leads to the About subpage. The subpage is also reachable through the menu.

Welcome message from the president.

Profile of the faculty

The Faculty of Architecture is part of the Czech Technical University in Prague, which was transformed from one of the oldest engineering schools in Central Europe, founded in 1707. Graduates and staff members of the Czech Technical University have created numerous remarkable engineering and architectural works, developed noteworthy technologies, mechanical and electrical devices, and achieved notable scientific accomplishments and inventions. Outstanding personalities associated with the CTU have been so numerous that it would not be fair to name a few here and forget the others. Many have gained noteworthy prizes and awards.
